Craze For Initials Grows And Grows

Propensity for initials which government agencies and newspapers, and assorted individuals, have indulged in for several decades should arouse sympathy for the youngsters of today. Traditionally they must cram their minds with spelling, multiplication tables, conjugations and other fundamentals of an education.

And somewhere along the way to maturity they are now called upon to find time to become familiar with the growing mass of abbreviations tossed at them so casually by the government, the press, the radio and television, and heard so often in ordinary conver-

The initials fad came to life and quickly got out of hand back in the 1930s. Government bureaus springing into existence during the depression led the way. Soon it was impossible to be sure whether the familiar AAA referred to the well-known automobile association or the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Then CCC became the substitute for the Civilian Conservation Corps, only to be used later to identify the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The last war spawned an additional crop of initials, generally more tricky than their predecessors. Most of these were military and usually they formed words-WAVES, WAC and SHAEF are samples. Now proposals of various kinds are being written and talked about with use of initials as labels. An early entry was UMT. One of the most recent is GAW for "guaranteed annual wage."

While some informative almanacs of former years carried as much as two pages of generally-used abbreviations, they have given that up now. One of these does carry a list of 70 "United States Administrative Abbreviations." If that total is multiplied several times to cover other sources of initial labels, some idea of the scope of the fad will be gained. It seems to have flourished partly because of laziness and partly because a craze like that just grows and grows.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

America's Greatest Writer!

Albert E. Kahn, the Matusow publisher, who during recent hearings before the Eastland Committee, on several occasions, took the Fifth Amendment, knows, beyond peradventure, that he is an important American writer. This is his own evaluation of his work:

". . . The comment I want to make on this particular matter is that 'The Great Conspiracy' was a book which was very widely published, which published and very widely read in the United States, a book to which Senator Claude Pepper wrote the introduction, and I believe had a circulation of more than a quarter of a million here.

"I think it impotant for the committee to recognize the fact that this book was not merely read elsewhere in the world but also read widely in the United States and, according to Barron's Financial Weekly, was a book that was stimulating and informative reading, and according to Newsweek magazine, a book extremely worth reading."

He received royalties from 25 or 30 countries where his book was widely circulated. I have read "The Great Conspiracy" and put it down as a hodgepodge of Communist propaganda, mostly taken out of already published material. Kahn says his book sold in the millions, which is astonishing because it would remembered it. Albert Kahn took the Fifth Amendment to the question of his being a Communist, but he made an interesting

I would simply say this, Senator: that he who attacks me for using the Fifth Amendment does not slander me but slanders the Constitution of the United States.

"The Chairman. Of course, that is the ground that Communists use when they don't want to state whether or not they are a Communist.

"Mr. Kahn. You mean, only Communists use the

. . Well, on orders for two books which I recall there was an advance payment for 20,000 copies, 10,000 of each book, an advance at the wholesale price of 50 cents—they were in the paper editions, these books from the United Electrical Workers, and 20,000 copies at 50 cents would be $5,000 on each of two books.

From the Furriers, I believe, and I am speaking from memory, there was an order on one book for 2,000 copies, which would amount to an advance order of $1,000,

"From Mine, Mill there was an advance order on Matusow's book for 2,000 copies, which amounted to $1,000, the first advance order. That was subsequently increased to $1,250, that is for 2,500 books, and finally, after some effort on my part to get the order up to 10,000, I managed to get it up to, I believe, around 6,700 books, which would be about, well, half of that, at 50 cents a book."

The Matusow case and Kahn's participation in it are clinical evidence of the continuing efforts of the left wingers and their ability to find financial support for whatever they want to do. On the other hand, those who defend the American system of government and life find it most difficult to finance their activities. For instance, during the past two years a militant group of anti-Communists have been tying to raise funds to start a magazine to counteract flourishing left-wing publications. It has been a difficult and unpleasant task. Those who have nothing to lose but their money, their property and their social system fear those who fight for them more than they do those who undermine them. It is an interesting commentary on the bourgeois mind.

'We are closing in on it," was Heller's cautious reply. He went on to tell how 120,000 women in Memphis had been examined for cancer and 695 cases discovered, 20 per cent of whom were women under 19 years.

"If we had enough money to make these examinations throughout the country," commented Magnuson, "think how many lives we could save!

"As a matter of fact," continued Magnuson, "the cost of this entire health institute over the years since we built it has been less than one destroyer

"It isn't a happy thing to think about," said the senator from Washington, "but one out of every five people either have cancer or are going to get it. Yet we seem to be afraid to appropriate money to fight man's most dread disease.'

NOTE - When Magnuson and Bone introduced the first cancer bill in 1938, never before had the federal government appropriated money to aid human beings by medical research. Congress had appropriated money to fight Bang's disease in cows and hoofand-mouth disease in sheep, hogs and cattle, but not a cent to combat human diseases.

Craze For Initials Grows And Grows

Propensity for initials which government agencies and newspapers, and assorted individuals, have indulged in for several decades should arouse sympathy for the youngsters of today. Traditionally they must cram their minds with spelling, multiplication tables, conjugations and other fundamentals of an education.

And somewhere along the way to maturity they are now called upon to find time to become familiar with the growing mass of abbreviations tossed at them so casually by the government, the press, the radio and television, and heard so often in ordinary conver-

The initials fad came to life and quickly got out of hand back in the 1930s. Government bureaus springing into existence during the depression led the way. Soon it was impossible to be sure whether the familiar AAA referred to the well-known automobile association or the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Then CCC became the substitute for the Civilian Conservation Corps, only to be used later to identify the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The last war spawned an additional crop of initials, generally more tricky than their predecessors. Most of these were military and usually they formed words-WAVES, WAC and SHAEF are samples. Now proposals of various kinds are being written and talked about with use of initials as labels. An early entry was UMT. One of the most recent is GAW for "guaranteed annual wage."

While some informative almanacs of former years carried as much as two pages of generally-used abbreviations, they have given that up now. One of these does carry a list of 70 "United States Administrative Abbreviations." If that total is multiplied several times to cover other sources of initial labels, some idea of the scope of the fad will be gained. It seems to have flourished partly because of laziness and partly because a craze like that just grows and grows.

America's Greatest Writer!

Albert E. Kahn, the Matusow publisher, who during recent hearings before the Eastland Committee, on several occasions, took the Fifth Amendment, knows, beyond peradventure, that he is an important American writer. This is his own evaluation of his work:

". . . The comment I want to make on this particular matter is that 'The Great Conspiracy' was a book which was very widely published, which published and very widely read in the United States, a book to which Senator Claude Pepper wrote the introduction, and I believe had a circulation of more than a quarter of a million here.

"I think it impotant for the committee to recognize the fact that this book was not merely read elsewhere in the world but also read widely in the United States and, according to Barron's Financial Weekly, was a book that was stimulating and informative reading, and according to Newsweek magazine, a book extremely worth reading.'

He received royalties from 25 or 30 countries where his book was widely circulated. I have read "The Great Conspiracy" and put it down as a hodgepodge of Communist propaganda, mostly taken out of already published material. Kahn says his book sold in the millions, which is astonishing because it would be difficult to find many Americans who read it or

Albert Kahn took the Fifth Amendment to the question of his being a Communist, but he made an interesting statement on the subject and I give you this colloquy:

'Mr. Kahn. I understand that many people have been attacked for using the Fifth Amendment. I would simply say this, Senator: that he who attacks me for using the Fifth Amendment does not slander me but slanders the Constitution of the United States.

"The Chairman. Of course, that is the ground that Communists use when they don't want to state whether or not they are a Communist.

"From the Furriers, I believe, and I am speaking from memory, there was an order on one book for 2,000 copies, which would amount to an advance order of $1,000,

"From Mine, Mill there was an advance order on Matusow's book for 2,000 copies, which amounted to $1,000, the first advance order. That was subsequently increased to $1,250, that is for 2,500 books, and finally, after some effort on my part to get the order up to 10,000, I managed to get it up to, I believe, around 6,700 books, which would be about, well, half of that, at 50 cents a book."

The Matusow case and Kahn's participation in it are clinical evidence of the continuing efforts of the left wingers and their ability to find financial support for whatever they want to do. On the other hand, those who defend the American system of government and life find it most difficult to finance their activities. cialism" from many of his colleagues.

Nevertheless, after a tough fight and with the help of Sen. Homer Bone, also of Washington and now U. S. Court of Appeals judge in San Francisco, the bill finally passed.

Last week the young man who introduced the bill, Sen, Warren Magnuson, now Senior senator from Washington, went out to Bethesda, Md., to inspect the National Institutes of Health which his bill had helped to found in 1938. At that time, Congress was so niggardly that no money was available for the land, but finally Mrs. Julia Wilson, whose husband had died of cancer, donated a large amount of acreage and gradually the chief cancer research center of the nation has been built.

Today it not only handles cancer but is experimenting with heart and mental diseases, and has managed to keep alive for six years a child stricken with leukemia. Hitherto, leukemia, cancer of the blood, has been fatal.

During his visit, Senator Magnuson asked Dr. John Heller, head of the National Cancer Institute, what progress they were making in discovering a cure for cancer.

"We are closing in on it," was Heller's cautious reply. He went on to tell how 120,000 women in Memphis had been examined for cancer and 695 cases discovered, 20 per cent of whom were women under 19 years.

"If we had enough money to make these examinations throughout the country," commented Magnuson, "think how many lives we could save!

"As a matter of fact," continued Magnuson, "the cost of this entire health institute over the years since we built it has been less than one destroyer

"It isn't a happy thing to think about," said the senator from Washington, "but one out of every five people either have cancer or are going to get it. Yet we seem to be afraid to appropriate money to fight man's most dread disease.' NOTE - When Magnuson and

Bone introduced the first cancer bill in 1938, never before had the federal government appropriated money to aid human beings by medical research. Congress had appropriated money to fight Bang's disease in cows and hoofand-mouth disease in sheep, hogs and cattle, but not a cent to combat human diseases.

Churchill To Stay Active, Continue Quest For Peace For a time, Churchill will spend By Stewart Alsop

The dinner at 10 Downing Street the night before Sir Winston Churchill resigned as prime minister of Britain, must have been a moving occasion, in a peculiarly British way. According to one of those present, who has described the occasion by overseas telephone, the high point of the evening came just after the old prime minister had drunk his toast to the Queen. to "the sacred causes and wise and kindly way of life of which your majesty is the young, gleaming champion.'

When the old man sat down, the guests were surprised to see the Queen rise, life her glass, and in a simple speech, toast "the health of my prime minister." The toast had a special, very English meaning. For as the young Queen noted, no reigning British monarch has ever before thus responded to the traditional toast to the occupant of the throne. To the tradition-minded British, the gesture was no doubt more meaningful than the offer of any number of dukedoms. The transfer of power is always a sad and moving spectacle, but especially so in the case of the great Churchill. Yet Sir Winston, it should be said, has no intention of quietly fading away. It is not in his nature. Genuine Affection

To be sure, he intends to make a special effort not to seem to overshadow his successor, Sir Anthony Eden, for whom he has a genuine if somewhat puckish affection. After his return from his month's vacation in Sicily, Churchill may appear on television two or three times, to campaign for the Conservatives in the election, now believed certain to take place in late May. But he will do what he can to make sure that the new prime minister, rather than the old, is the central figure in the

Not To His Liking

The departure is real in the sense that Churchill will never again participate in a British government. Moreover, contrary to some reports, he has no intention of taking part in a meeting at the summit, which now looks very much more probable than when he first loyal party man, and he was proposed it. The history project might be enough to occupy the time of most 80-year-old men. But not Churchill. As he himself is said to have pointed out with some asperity in recent days, he may have said farewell to the premiership but he has most decidedly not said farewell to Parliament or public life.

In short, the last has by no tunity which they could not afford conference. Moreover, to go to old man. His beloved Parliament to miss. He had already agreed such a meeting as a mere adviser will give him the platform from which to speak on the subject which now almost obsesses him to the exclusion of all others - the quest for peace in the nuclear age. Well Worth Waiting

It will be well worth waiting to hear the results of Churchill's musings on this subject, in the intervals between goldfish-feeding and history-writing. Five or six years ago, when the atomic age was young, Churchill was heard to remark half to himself at a small luncheon that he had known war was coming from the moment Hitler took power-he felt it in his heart. "But," he continued, "I do not feel it in my heart now."

So far, he has been right-again In 1946 we knew Poland had and again the spectre of world war has loomed up over the world, and then receded. And it is a little reassuring, at least, to learn that even now, in the infinitely more menacing shadow of the hydrogen bomb, the old man still does not "feel war in his heart." The day-to-day changes in the Dow Averages are magnified. In the case of the industrials, if-on a straight mathematical average shown by the Dow average release would be up by more than 5 points! The reason for the magnification of changes is that the Dow Averages are no longer arithmetic averages. That is, instead of taking the aggregate value of the 30 stocks in the series and then dividing the sum by 30, they now take the aggregate value and use an adjusted divisor which at the present time is 5.75. Thus, the daily change in the average is actually magnified in a ratio of 30 to 5.75, or about 5.2 to 1,

SOUTH had one bit of bad | the spade six. South won, then led a diamond to dummy and returned a club toward his own

If East had played low at this point (as 99 out of every 100 defenders would do), he would have made things easy for declarer. who of course would have put on a low card. Then, even if West held up his king, South could return to dummy and pass another club, thus collecting three tricks in the suit.

Actually, however, East foresaw this development and boldly put up the club queen. Declarer won and led the club jack, but West properly held up his king. Now declarer started to fear that he would be shut out of his own hand, so he cashed his spade queen and then led a heart toward dummy, hoping to guess right. As it happened, however, he guessed wrong, putting up the king. East returned a club, and after West cashed his king, he threw dummy in with the diamond and waited for the two heart tricks that had to be given to him.

If South, after cashing two club tricks, had run the diamonds and then exited from dummy with his right, opened the spade jack. I the last club, the defenders would East put up the ace and led back | have been in a hopeless position. Distributed by King Features Syndicate

Memory of Mother, Mary, E. G. (Bettie) Allen who died one year ago, April 11th. In a lonely grave-yard Not so very far away, Sleeps my dear and precious Mother There beneath the cold cold clay.

Precious memories sweetly linger And I miss her more each day Life has been so sad and lonely Since dear Mother went away.

When the long night of waiting has ended And the trials of life are o'er I hope to meet you and loved ones, Where parting will come no more.

Sadly missed by daughter Myrtle Taylor.

In loving memory of James Floyd Boone, who died 12 years ago, April 11, 1943.

What would I give to clasp his hand, His happy face to see, To hear his voice and see his smile, That meant so much to me. Nothing can ever take away

The love a heart holds dear, Fond memories linger every day, Remembrance keeps him near.

His Mother, NELLIE BOONE

In Memoriam Memory of Mother, Mary, E. G. (Bettie) Allen who died one year ago, April 11th.

Not so very far away, Sleeps my dear and precious Mother There beneath the cold cold clay. Precious memories sweetly linger And I miss her more each day Life has been so sad and lonely Since dear Mother went away.

When the long night of waiting has ended And the trials of life are o'er I hope to meet you and loved ones, Where parting will come no more.

Sadly missed by daughter Myrtle Taylor. In loving memory of James Floyd Boone who died 12 years ago, April 11, 1943. What would I give to clasp his hand, His happy face to see, To hear his voice and see his smile, That meant so much to me. Nothing can ever take away Fond memories linger every day, Remembrance keeps him near

Woodland Fire Fighter Rescued After Accident

Moorefield Man Fractures Leg

A 28-year-old Moorefield (W. Va.) man was rescued just before flames could reach him, yesterday afternoon after he fractured a leg while fighting a stubborn woodand fire in a rugged section of Hardy County.

West Virginia State Police Cpl. C. E. Hamrick of Moorefield said the fire had almost been brought under control when Junior Wratchford sustained a leg fracture between his knee and ankle. When members of the 20-man
